Chargers visit brighten day of rehab patients

by Greg Eichelberger

In an effort to lift their spirits, patients at the San Diego Rehabilitation Institute in La Mesa, and their families, were treated to a recent party with two Chargers' players and a jazz synthesizer band led by Bolts' Director of Security, Dick Lewis.

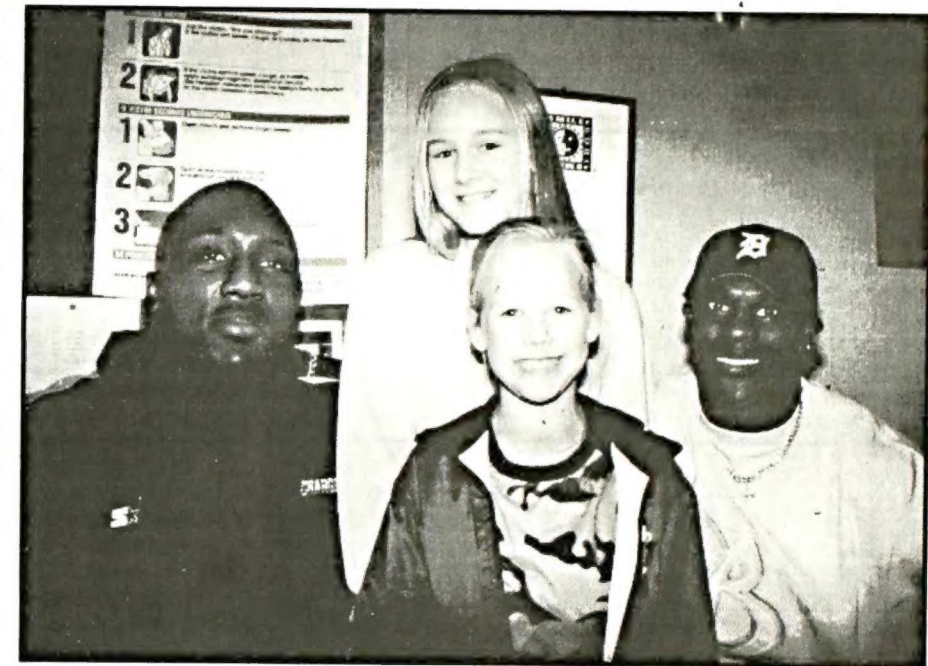

It was all part of a continuing community outreach program being fostered by the team.

The team's performance was not important at this particular bash, as dozens of stroke, brain injury, respiratory illness victims and amputees, among others, and families gathered to meet rookie defensive end Cedric Harden and first-year cornerback Clifford Ivory.

The two signed autographs, talked with and shared memories for more than an hour, even taking time to have photos taken with staff after the event was concluded.

"They were very gracious," said 10-year Recreation Therapist and Jamul resident, Mary Williams. "They were very sweet and we had a wonderful visit with them."

She said that many of the patients waited over 45 minutes for the party to start, and were quite excited for several days prior.

Williams mentioned the "Comeback Club," a group of former patients who meet regularly to help out others emotionally who are early in the recovery process, and the work the group has done for that cause.

The band, known as "Time Out," featured lead vocalist Lewis crooning soft ballads to the ladies, who in turn swooned over him like Rudy Valli or Frank Sinatra in days gone by. An enjoyable time seemed to be had by everyone.

"I had a great time," said Linda Lilley, of Spring Valley, recuperating from a back injury. She thought it was so sweet to see the players, and that when he (Lewis) sang to her, she thought she was faint. She added that it was a beautiful experience.

The two rookies thought it was just as nice for them, as well. "I got a little emotional because I realized that one of these folks could be my mom or dad," said Ivory, who lives in Atlanta and is a graduate of Troy State University.

He said that it showed just how much the Lord has blessed him in my life, and that it made him very

Jupiter visible in daylight Thursday

On Thursday, there's a chance to see Jupiter in daylight. A few minutes before sunset, locate the crescent moon well up in south-southwest. From all of U.S. except Alaska, Jupiter is 2 to 3 degrees from the moon.

Look to the moon's upper right from most of the country. If the sky is sufficiently clear, binoculars will easily show Jupiter by the time the sun sets.

As the sky darkens, Jupiter is prominent near the moon. During evening hours until they set, watch the moon drift slowly relative to Jupiter.

YMCA wellness fair seeks to strengthen families

The Davis/Grossmont Family YMCA free wellness fair will be held from 10 a.m. - 1 p.m. on Saturday.

Those who join the YMCA at the wellness fair will save half off the membership joining fee - a savings of up to $38.

The Y believes that it is the place to be for families who want to strengthen their bodies, minds and spirits.

To help families commit to their New Year's resolutions, the YMCA in La Mesa will be hosting this annual open house and wellness fair which focuses on families.

Children and adults will benefit from the Children's 10 Mobile vision tests, osteoporosis and stroke prevention information, immunization information, DARE information provided by the La Mesa Police Department, nutrition information, MADD and the American Cancer Society.

The YMCA is offering selected free aerobic fitness classes, yoga classes, lap swimming, water exercise and weight training, which began Jan. 11 and culminates on Saturday at the wellness fair. Call the YMCA at 464-1323 for more details on this special offer.

Each week, the Family YMCA offers eight specialized senior aerobics classes called "Stretch and Tone."

The classes emphasize flexibility, relaxation, muscular strength and conditioning exercises and has a light cardio-vascular component.

Hour-long classes are offered Monday through Friday mornings. The Y also offers Yoga classes on Wednesday and Friday evenings.

Water exercise in the the Y's heated, outdoor swimming pool is one of the most popular senior activities at the facility.

Water exercise helps maintain flexibility, increase muscular strength and strengthen the cardio-vascular system, but is easy on the joints and connective tissues.

Water exercise is held at various times Monday through Saturday.

The La Mesa YMCA also offers reduced membership rates for seniors.

The East County Family YMCA is a full-service facility located in La Mesa just off the 125 freeway at 8881 Dallas St. in La Mesa.

On a regular basis, it offers fitness classes for adults ranging from yoga to Aikido, sports, childcare, martial arts, swimming, gymnastics, camp, youth and government for children and many specialty programs for seniors.

Free tours of the YMCA will be offered throughout the month of January. For more information, call 464-1323.

Cajon Speedway banquet to honor year's winners

by Joe Naiman

The annual Cajon Speedway awards banquet will be held this year at the Mission Valley Marriott on Jan. 30 to honor the top drivers and car owners of the 1998 season as well as announce the rookie of the year, best looking car and most improved driver in each class.

It will start at 5 p.m. with a no-host bar prior to dinner at 6:30. The program commences about 7:15 followed by dancing until about 1:30 a.m. and a drawing for door prizes.

Danny Grill, the director of NASCAR's Featherlite Southwest Tour, will be the speaker at the banquet.

Tom McGrath, the public address announcer at the Cajon Speedway, will be the emcee at the banquet.

The festivities will also see the presentation of the Chris Trickle Fan Favorite Awards to the drivers who earned the most fan votes in each class.

Becky McBride, the coordinator banquet, stated that additional special awards would be held as a surprise until the awards night.

In addition to the awards and Grill's speech, there will also be a short tribute to Dennis Vowles, the Cajon Speedway's starter who passed away shortly after the end of the 1998 season.

The banquet is held in January but celebrates Cajon Speedway's previous season, and this year's affair will have a theme of celebrating NASCAR's 50th anniversary, founded in 1948.

Cost of the dinner and banquet is now $32.50 per person.

Tickets may be purchased by visiting Fred Perry at the track or by calling 442-1341.

Rehab

thankful, indeed.

It was also not lost on him that he could end up in rehabilitation one day, if he suffered an injury on the gridiron.

"If I do have to undergo surgery or a long recuperative period, I'd certainly like to have people come and visit me, whether family or friends - that's really important," he commented.

Brian Devel, 8, son of don Devel of Lakeside, was one of a handful of children there who appreciated the gesture as much as anyone else. He said it was the closest he had ever been to a professional athlete and he was ecstatic.

Rebecca (8) and Rachel (12) Whiteaker of Santee, visiting a family friend, were just as enthusiastic.

"The players were so nice to the kids," said their mother, Betty Whiteaker. "It's something they will never forget."

Williams indicated that more programs with the Chargers are planned in the future.

"It's very important to give these people all of the assistance we can, both physical and mental," she added.

She also noted that the players and the band just made that process a little more special for all of us.

Commentary Leave it to the refs

by Marv Rosen

This season in football, both at the college and professional level (and possibly at the preps, too), there has been an increased pressure to bring in instant replay.

The reasoning is that too crucial plays are too often muffed by the refs.

I agree, but still believe that instant replay should be "up to refs" and not fall on the coaches as it was the last time it was used.

What is needed is a referee who would be stationed in the press box (suitably isolated), who's sole job is to take a look at the replays rapidly, which the TV station these days does almost instantly whenever any "call" might be dubious.

If he spots an obvious error, especially in a crucial "game decider," he should be able to call the error to the attention of the referee on the field who would then have his miniconference to look at the replay himself. (Remember, the TV replay may not be able to really show that the call was wrong.)

Obviously, the spotter official (why not?) has to have good judgement to be able to know when the TV may have "lied" by having as poor an angle as the referees on the field and be able to do so very quickly so as to hold up the game no more than is necessary.

Since that official is farther removed from the emotion of the game, he should be able to make that kind of decision more easily without the pressure of players and coaches involved from their partisan viewpoint.

Incidentally, that person could also be a "she," for those same reasons.

After all, the refs don't like to be made to appear to be biased or just plain incompetent when they "blow one."

On a related subject, why is it that the National Football League, with its obvious wealth, does not want to hire the refs on a full-time basis. The excuse that they would only be working half a year doesn't hold water, as the teams pay their players for only the same length of time.
